In Mind, Self and Society, George H. Mead describes how the mind and self of individuals come from the social process. Mead analyzes individual's experiences from the "standpoint of communication as essential to the social order.". According to Mead the "mind" stems from the social process of communication and cannot be understood without that process.

Mind, Self, and Society from the Standpoint of a Social Behaviorist. George Herbert Mead, Charles W. Morris (ed.) Written from the standpoint of the social behaviorist, this treatise contains the heart of Mead's position on social psychology. The analysis of language is of major interest, as it supplied for the first time an adequate treatment of the language mechanism in relation to scientific and philosophical issues.

George Herbert Mead is widely recognized as one of the most brilliantly original American pragmatists. Although he had a profound influence on the development of social philosophy, he published no books in his lifetime. This makes the lectures collected in Mind, Self, and Society all the more remarkable, as they offer a rare synthesis of his ideas.
